Council OKs resolution to advance water upgrades

City opts back into state opioid suit

BY MARK CAMPBELL

A day after a 900-page Water Utility Master Plan was unveiled to members of Madison's Board of Public Works and Safety, a public hearing was held on the plan and the estimated $12.3 million bond issue that will be needed to finance the first phase of the work at Tuesday's Madison City Council meeting.

According to Rob Bellucci, of Commonwealth Engineers, the scope of the project is large but since the city's water system has not seen significant upgrades in 20 years a wide range of improvements are needed. The $12.3 million first place includes about $10.6 million in construction costs with the remainder earmarked for engineering and finance fees.

The project will be funded by a 20-year bond issue but how much money will be needed won't be determined until the city's cash contribution is established, interest rates are set and the bids are let. The project would be bid in three phases — tank repairs and upgrades, pipe replacements and mechanical controls — with work beginning later this year and completion mostly likely in early 2024. A second and third phase of the project — both much less costly and involved than Phase One — could then be pursued as city finances allow.

'My Fair Lady' coming to stage at MCHS

BY BOB DEMAREE

Madison Theatre will return to the golden age of theater for its musical production this weekend when "My Fair Lady" is staged at Opal E. Sherman Auditorium.

"It's one of the classics," said Mia Mires, who will dancing and sing in the chorus of the Madison Consolidated High School performance at 7 p.m. on Friday and Saturday and 2:30 p.m. on Sunday.

Mires said it will be a treat for theater buffs "who know of it as one of a great ones ... but I also encourage those who know nothing about theater to come see it. If you're new to theater, it's a great first classic to see" with "all different kinds of music and a nice story line to follow and it's very entertaining."

Based on George Bernard Shaw's 1913 play "Pygmalion" with lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner and music by Frederick Loewe, "My Fair Lady" is about Eliza Doolittle, a Cockney flower girl who takes speech lessons from professor Henry Higgins, a phonetician, so that she may pass as a lady.

Ethan Mack, who plays Higgins along with Gibsen Faulkner, said his character encounters Colonel Hugh Pickering, and the two end up making a bet whether Doolittle can be taught proper English in time for the Embassy Ball. "If the king can tell she's a lady, then she gets a present at the end, and if the king can see through her, and sees she's not a lady then they lose the bet and they lose the money," said Mack. In the process, Higgins becomes attached to Doolittle and has an internal dilemma about whether his intentions are good for Eliza, or good for winning the bet

"He's kind of the good guy and bad guy because he's fighting with himself quite a bit," Mack said.

Several of the roles are shared with the actors in different performances — Shelby Priebe and Emma Reilmann as Eliza Doolittle, Will Ratcliff and Danny Winters as Colonel Pickering, Saba Chabukashvili and Karson Couch as Freddy Enysford-Hill, Zoe Bullock and Lilly Guirguis as Mrs. Higgins, Brooklyn Cornelius and Sophie Guirguis as Mrs. Pearce/Mrs. Enysford-Hill, and Preston Kuppler as Alfred P. Doolittle

Regional singing contest comes to Madison

CHARLIE ROHLFING
CHARLIE'S BEAT

An "American Idol-style" singing contest is starting this Saturday at Mad Paddle Brewery here in Madison. Dubbed the "Can You Rock! Regional Singer Contest" it is the brainchild of Rusty Hamilton, the drummer in the madESSENCE house band.

"We were doing a house band rehearsal one night," explains Mad Paddle owner Jerry Wade, "and Rusty says something about how many great singers we have in our area and how we should have a contest and give them a way to showcase their talents.

"We decided to include the entire tri-state region, and make it open to any and all singers, regardless of amateur or professional status. Even a pro like Madison's own Rusty Bladen could compete if he wanted to. The fact is, pros like Rusty are busy most Saturdays when we are holding the contest, but it is wide open to everyone, 18 and older.

"We're offering prizes for the three top singers. $800 for first place, $200 for second, and a $100 gift certificate for third. You can find complete contest rules at madpaddle.com/events-2/ and you can enter by sending a video of yourself singing to info@madpaddle.com.

"The contest will be held in four rounds of preliminary competition, and a final fifth round to determine the winners. The first round is this Saturday, March 12 at Mad Paddle, but it's not too late to enter and get in on the fun.

"The way we're doing the contest is kind of unique and fun. It's not an acapella performance with no backing music, like American Idol did it. And it's not like Karaoke where you have a recorded backing track. You perform with the madESSENCE all-star band as your backing group.

"After you apply and we determine from your audition video that you have the basic singing skills to compete, we'll give you a list of 200 popular songs to choose from. Most are classic rock and pop tunes from the 70s to the 90s.

"For example, this coming weekend we have Josh Ahern singing Amarillo by Morning. Jason Cohen is doing Wonderful Tonight, the great Eric Clapton song. Allie Taylor is covering Sitting on the Dock of the Bay. Kera Williams is singing Hotel California. And Carmen Kyle will be doing her version of the smoky Tennessee Whiskey.

"These contest songs will be mixed into the full sets of the madESSENCE show, so it will have a fun feel of a variety show, with lots of different singers and styles.

"Every week we'll have one winner who advances to the finals. But that winner also gets to come back each week of the contest to keep working on their performance and building a following. It should be a lot of fun for the singers and the audience.

"Like I said, the first round is this weekend, with the second round on April 9, third round on April 30, fourth round on May 21, and then the final round on June 25. By that time each of the finalists should have a lot of energy and enthusiastic followers making some noise.

"We just think a contest like this is an important part of Madison being Indiana's Music City. Not only featuring the great, established players that we have in abundance, but providing opportunities for the younger and upcoming talent to show their stuff and contribute to the overall music scene."

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK

If you look at the calendar below you'll see that The Central has music on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. But it's important to remember that they also have live music every Wednesday! Because this column comes out in the Thursday paper, it's always too late to mention the Wednesday shows. But rest assured, they are committed to four days a week live music. Jimmy and Bill and Crystal and all the gang there at The Central deserve a huge debt of gratitude for helping to make Indiana's Music City a reality. And remember, if you're looking for a good time on a Hump Day, look no further than The Central.

Parks board receives feedback on 5-year plan

BY BOB DEMAREE

Madison Parks Board received feedback on the need for more senior citizens programming at a public hearing Monday related to the city's proposed five-year master plan for the park system.

Ratio Architect representatives John Jackson, director of Landscape Architecture and Urban Design, and Keri VanVlymen, a landscape designer, made the presentation to the Parks Board.

The process, required by the Indiana Department of Natural Resources, involves a presentation to define goals and priorities for the Madison Parks Department with the final plan to be submitted by April 15, VanVlymen said.

Jackson noted that approving the master plan positions the city to apply for Land and Conservation grants to address needs and make improvements to the parks.

VanVlymen said one of the goals is to make greater investment in neighborhood parks with Oak Hill and Gaines parks of highest priority. Another goal is to improve the city's communication and online presence to better inform the public of parks programming and increase participation. There is also a need to hire additional landscape and maintenance staff to better maintain and care for the parks system and work toward goals established in the previous five-year plan to upgrade major facilities like the city campground, Rucker Sports Complex and Sunrise Golf Course among others as well as an overall goal to improve accessibility throughout the system.

VanVlymen said 73% of the respondents who completed a parks survey said it is important to have parks within walking distance. Evaluating the density of the population and how long it takes people to walk to nearby parks, can help determine which locations would benefit most by new parks development.

She said the survey also found that 54% of the respondents use local parks at least weekly with walking and trails "at the top of every survey we see," and playgrounds also rated highly. She added that 58% believe parks need to be better maintained and 75% would support more funding for parks, particularly to seek grants to help with that funding.

However, VanVlymen noted that grants are not sustainable over long periods of time so long-term solutions also need to be developed to address the need for long-term funding.

COUNCIL

"Phase One is where we get the most bang for our buck," said Bellucci, noting that water system improvements are ideally ongoing but with such a long gap between upgrades, the city has a lot of needs that are more immediate.

The way the work will be structured, customers should see very little disruption of service during the project. Existing equipment will continue to serve customers as components are replaced or upgraded and once the new equipment is fully functional the impacted customers will be switched from the old system to the new with loss of service lasting no more than a few hours to have the least amount of impact on customers.

The work will upgrade the city's seven wells with new mechanical equipment and controls, three treatment plants with new filtration and purification equipment, six storage tanks with new controls and 600,000 linear feet of water mains to provide larger or more reliable lines that will better serve customers and provide better water pressure for fire safety. The hope also is to convert all remaining water meters over to newer high-tech meters that are easier to read and provide better tracking of water usage and replace about 30 substandard hydrants of which seven have been designated unreliable for fire-fighting purposes.

Following the hearing, council members unanimously adopted a resolution to move forward with the project and specifically to apply for loans and bonds to help finance the project.

"This is not committing us to anything but it allows us to apply for loans," city attorney Jone Jenner said of the resolution. "This is truly nothing more than a loan application."

However, that loan could determine how much of a hit customers will see as the money borrowed is repaid through a rate increase or series of increases as the water system finances this and other maintenance projects moving forward.

"The majority of the financing is going to come from a loan — a bond," Mayor Bob Courtney said, later adding "rate increases are inevitable. Inflation erodes our rate increase every year."

The city's last water rate increases was in 2008 and Madison has some of the lowest rates in the state — a situation that actually worked against the city on applications for grant funding — but Madison also provides drinking water to all of its customers, both residential and commercial, as well as 80% of Jefferson County.

In other business, the council:

- Approved a resolution to opt back into a state's lawsuit against opioid makers that was recently settled. Madison, and about 50% of the other cities in the state, had opted out of the state's suit several months ago because the way the proposed settlement was structured very little of the money would come back to local communities to help deal with their costs associated with opioid abuse.

Courtney said the attorney general's office has since restructured the proposed settlement payout with terms acceptable to the city so Madison should opt back into the suit and move forward.

"This brings more funds back to the communities to work with," Courtney said.

- Approved awarding the city's final Riverfront Liquor License to the Pizza Uncommon franchise located in the former Roger's Corner building at Main and West streets.

With no more licenses left to issue, and the potential for more business development in the food and entertainment sector, Madison Economic Development Director Tony Steinhardt III said the council should probably revisit the licensing issue to determine if Madison can support more licenses and how many additional licenses should be allowed for continued growth and development.

BOARD

Jackson gave an overview of improvements that might be done at three of the parks — Oak Hill Park with a new playground and possibly a pickleball court, Gaines Park where community gardens could be developed while recognizing the site's history as a former school, and Lytle Park as a potential site for music performances. Although only those three parks were described in the presentation, Jackson emphasized that all city parks are included in the five-year master plan.

Lisa Ferguson, a downtown resident, expressed the need for parks to be multi-generational facilities where "parents and grandparents play" alongside their children "rather than sitting on the sides on their phone or reading a book." She said adults need activities that engage them and the children rather than just watching and that strong community parks could serve both local residents and also be a "regional draw" that brings more people to Madison.

Gaila Crouch, who lives at Hereford Lake, expressed the need for restrooms at parks — especially for older and younger patrons.

"I see nothing on there about restrooms, Crouch said of the master plan. "Older people and younger people definitely need restrooms."

Board member Phil Kahn agreed, adding that more restrooms and updates to existing restrooms would be beneficial to everyone who uses the parks system.

"Restrooms are important to young, middle and older people," Kahn said. "Keeping those and keeping them updated, if we're going to do this, they are important to young and old."

Marriage reeling after family's horrific loss

JEANNE PHILLIPS
DEAR ABBY

Dear Abby: Our house burned down a year ago, and we lost everything. My husband, "Jeff," tried desperately to get to our 2-year-old daughter, but she perished in the fire. I managed to get our 3-year-old son out while he was trying to save our daughter. Jeff ended up in a burn unit on a ventilator for nine days because he burned his lungs. When he was released from the hospital, things got worse.

We lived with my mom and stepdad for a bit until we found a place, but as soon as Jeff got home, he started hitting me and calling me a cheating slut. We have been together 20 years, and I have been faithful. If I go to the store or to run errands, he gets mad at me for being gone a little too long. If I try to explain what held me up, it's automatically because I'm cheating, but Jeff feels he can leave and be gone for hours, and it's OK for him.

I love him, but I can't take it anymore. When our son acts out and starts being mean to me, Jeff tells him to respect me, but I think to myself, "How can you tell him to respect me when you don't?" Abby, please help me. — So Lost in the East

Dear So Lost: The fire and tragic death of your daughter has done more damage to your husband than sear his lungs. It has also taken an emotional toll. It is important that you no longer allow him to take out his anger and frustration with himself on you.

If you have any power at all in your relationship, insist he seek help from a licensed mental health professional. If he refuses, you cannot remain married to him because his physical and emotional abuse may continue to escalate, and seeing it will affect your son.

Have an escape plan in place before you confront him. A safe way to formulate one would be to contact the National Domestic Violence Hotline. The toll-free number is 800-799-7233 and the website is thehotline.org. Do it NOW.

Dear Abby: My high school friend returns to our hometown once or twice a year. Her last several visits were exhausting. She talked about herself for hours without asking one question about my life. She objectifies men and calls people weak for expressing their emotions.

Our friendship has been a long one. I went to her wedding and did the flowers for her dad's funeral. But the more I understand myself, the more I see how toxic she is for me. I have reached the hard realization that I no longer want to be around her. I don't like who she is or how she makes me feel.

I would like us to simply drift apart, but she can be a bully. When I have tried to be unavailable, she has bullied me into seeing her anyway. My partner says I need to break up with her, but I don't want to hurt her or have a confrontation. How can I gracefully exit this relationship? — Stressed in the West

Dear Stressed: There may not be a graceful way to exit from a relationship with a bully. Ask yourself which would be worse: telling her exactly what you have written to me, or allowing yourself to be steamrollered into another exhausting and frustrating encounter with her. Once you have the answer to that question, you will know exactly what to do, which may start with blocking her number.

Man's behavior centers only on himself at home

Dear Abby: I refer to my husband as "the most single married man" I know. He turns off the lights, turns off the heat and turns off the TV while I'm still watching or still plan on being home.

His latest "single" thing is that he planned a birthday dinner out with our son and other family members. Guess what? I found out about it from the birthday boy. We have been married almost 50 years. All our children are in their 40s.

I have spoken to him numerous times about his forgetting my presence in a room, but I have never been excluded from a family birthday until now. I am thinking of writing a book titled, "The Most Single Married Man I Know." What should I be doing differently? — Forgotten Woman in New Hampshire

Dear Forgotten: If this has been going on since you and your husband were married, accept that he is someone who is unusually centered on himself. If this is something relatively recent, he may need to be physically and neurologically evaluated by his physician.

If there is nothing "wrong" with him, recognize it's time to fend for yourself. Remember to monitor the thermostat, keep a flashlight handy and be prepared to explore activities you enjoy in case your husband "forgets" to include you in the future.

JEANNE PHILLIPS
DEAR ABBY

Dear Abby: My best friend's father recently passed away. A memorial has been planned on the day of a wedding I had agreed to attend with my girlfriend. In this situation involving two significant one-time life events, is it more courteous to defer to the living or the dead? — Unsure in Southern California

Dear Unsure: Much depends upon your relationship with both of these people. Because your best friend may need emotional support during this sad time, I am inclined to suggest that you go to the memorial — and have your girlfriend attend the wedding so you will be represented. If you explain the circumstances to the person who sent the wedding invitation, there should be no hurt feelings.

Dear Abby: I recently received a board game as a present. The problem is that I don't like the game. I live alone on disability with a very limited income and don't have anyone to play it with me anyway.

When I mentioned to the giver that I was thinking of returning it, they almost burst into tears. The giver is a relative of a close friend and lives with her. I really could use the money. What should I do? — Wondering in Wisconsin

Dear Wondering: I have said this before, and it's worth repeating: Once a gift is given, it belongs to the recipient to do with as they please. Because you don't like the game, have no one to play it with and need the money, return the darn thing. Your mistake was announcing your intention to the giver.

MADISON COURIER GIRLS SWIMMER OF THE YEAR

Nina Campbell

Southwestern freshman Raygan Crawford is The Madison Courier Girls Swimmer of the Year.

Southwestern's Crawford ends freshman season a champion

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Raygan Crawford wasn't sure what to expect during her freshman season. She knew that she could compete and she was confident in her abilities, but the last thing she expected was to be a champion.

Crawford capped her spectacular freshman season with a trip to the IHSAA State Finals and is this year's choice as Madison Courier Girls Swimmer of the Year.

From the moment she dived into the pool, she was a force. She won three Ohio River Valley Conference championships and broke school records in both the 100-yard backstroke (1:06.66) and 100-yard butterfly (1:02.39). But it was her performance in the 100 fly sectional finals at Floyd Central that stood out the most.

"We knew she was going to have a good year. But we didn't expect the 100 back record in December," Southwestern coach Shelly Anderson said. "She just walked in on that one and took that one down and then it was like hmm, maybe there's more to her than we thought."

Even a month later, Crawford said memories of the event are a little fuzzy.

"I don't really remember it that much. But from what I do remember, I remember touching the wall on the third 25 and seeing that one of the girls was like right next to me and so I knew I had to pick it up for the last one," Crawford said. "But actually, winning? That's a blur."

Crawford was seeded third in the 100 fly coming into the sectional but broke the school record while winning her preliminary race. Still, Crawford and her coaches didn't have high expectations in the finals, especially with such fast swimmers on each side of her.

But Crawford swam a perfect race and held a slight lead after making her final turn. She then was able to hold on for the win, but didn't realize it until she saw her teammates and coaches jumping up and down screaming.

"We were happy with the third place seeds. Everything is up in the air when you've got four or five kids that are all sitting at the same time," said Jay Crawford, Southwestern's head coach and Raygan's father. "She swam smart and she listened to what we've been telling her. Her under waters were awesome. That's what won that race. She basically took two less strokes than the girls on either side of her. She stayed under longer, which we preach all the time. Being underwater can make or break you in a race, especially a close race, because if you can take eight or 10 less strokes than the person next to you, you've got that much left in the tank at the end of the race."

Crawford's sectional win was the first for a Southwestern swimmer, male or female, in school history and she joined Carolina Curioni as the only Rebels to ever compete in the state finals. Her trip to the Indiana University Natatorium in Indianapolis ended with a 32nd place on a time three seconds slower than her sectional win. While she was disappointed in that effort, she was pleased to have made the trip.

"I thought (I was happy to just be there) until I found out that the person who finished first was also a freshman. And I got a little more nervous because there were more my age so it looks like I wasn't as good as I thought I was," Raygan said. "A lot of people told me to just enjoy the experience and stuff like that. But for me, it was more like, I know what I need to do and I didn't feel like I got to that."

Raygan is already looking forward to next season and knows in order to get faster she needs to get stronger. Her favorite event is the backstroke, but having already established herself as a butterfly champion, she wants to get even faster in that stroke.

"I'm going to get in the weight room a lot more to get myself stronger. This past year, I didn't work on the fly as much as I know I should. So next year I'll be working on it a lot more," she said. "My favorite is to swim backstroke but I don't hate swimming fly. I just wears me out."

"I think if you compare the top 8-16 at the state meet, it was really about size and strength. She understands that and she really hasn't been in the weight room a whole lot," Jay Crawford said. "I think the focus over from now until the season starts is we're just going to have a plan to be in the weight room and have a specific lifting plan to focus on what she needs to do. Because that's what it will take to not only keep her going back, but keep her moving up in those placements at the state."

As Raygan Crawford reflected back on her freshman season, she really couldn't thank her teammates enough, especially senior Julia Worcester, who was last year's Courier Girls Swimmer of the Year and who took Raygan under her wing this year.

"They've supported me through the whole year, especially Julia. Julia was my practice buddy and she pushed me through everything," Raygan said. "(But) they're just really supportive and my coaches are really good. My dad pushed me and I always thought like the whole year that he was being really hard on me, but then I knew at the end that it was worth it because he pushed me to where I know I could be."

Hanover softball posts DH sweep of Centre

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Hanover softball posted a doubleheader sweep — 5-1 and 9-7 — at Centre on Tuesday in Danville, Kentucky.

Hanover scored single runs in the first three innings then pushed two across in the top of the seventh to win game one.

Katherine Dickinson and Kendra Hutchison each had a double and a single to lead Hanover's offense. Dickinson also had two RBIs and a stolen base while Hutchison scored a run and drove in a run.

Kensie Bradley had a double for the Panthers, Ava Hilgenhold and Carson Kruse each had a single and an RBI, Lauren Beaman had a hit and scored a run, and Lily Beurman had a hit.

Beurman (2-2) also picked up the win in the circle after striking out 11 and walking just one while allowing one run on five hits in seven innings.

Hanover erupted for five runs in the top of the fourth inning to erase a three-run deficit to pick up the win in game two. Bradley, Carson Bennett and Hutchison opened the inning with three-straight doubles to score two runs then Kruse hammered a two-run home run to center field to give the Panthers the lead. Hanover added a final unearned run in the inning.

Hutchison was 4-for-5 on the day with an RBI and two runs scored while Kruse was 2-for-3 with four RBIs and two runs scored. Bennett had two doubles and an RBI and Mallorie Fultz was 2-for-3 with a double and an RBI.

Beamon (1-0) worked the final six and two-thirds innings in relief of starter Gracie Henson to pick up the win. Beamon allowed two unearned runs on three hits and struck out two while walking three.

Hanover, now 4-4, had its home opener against Hope this weekend due to the weather forecast. The Panthers will now hold their home opener on Tuesday against Asbury.

Kentucky's Tshiebwe earns AP's SEC player of year honors

BY JOHN ZENOR
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kentucky forward Oscar Tshiebwe is a unanimous pick as The Associated Press player of the year in the Southeastern Conference.

No. 4 Auburn's Bruce Pearl is coach of the year and Tigers' freshman forward Jabari Smith is newcomer of the year. The AP All-SEC team was released Tuesday and voted on by 13 journalists covering the league.

Like Tshiebwe, guards JD Notae of Arkansas and Scotty Pippen Jr. of Vanderbilt were unanimous picks as first-team All-SEC. They were joined on the team by Smith and Auburn center Walker Kessler. Tshiebwe received votes at both center and forward and as top newcomer.

The nation's leading rebounder, Tshiebwe averaged 17.3 points and 15.3 boards per game for the Wildcats. A native of Lubumbashi in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the 6-foot-9, 255-pounder transferred midway through his second season at West Virginia and sat out the rest of 2020-21.

Once eligible, Tshiebwe helped forge an impressive turnaround for the fifth-ranked Wildcats, who were 9-16 last season. They enter the SEC Tournament with a 25-6 record.

Tshiebwe has posted 25 double doubles, second-most nationally.

"I mean, he's arguably the best rebounder in the history of modern college basketball," Alabama coach Nate Oats said Monday.

Pearl led the Tigers to the SEC regular season title with a team whose top four scorers and starting point guard are all in their first year with the program. He received a new eight-year deal worth more than $50 million in January.

That group of newcomers includes Smith, the highest rated signee in program history and a likely NBA draft lottery pick who's also considered a candidate to go No. 1 overall.

The 6-10, 220-pound Smith leads the Tigers in scoring, averaging 17.1 points and 6.9 rebounds a game. He's also made 71 of 163 3-pointers (43.6%) and is an 82.2% free throw shooter (120 of 146).

Badgers' Davis, Gard take AP Big Ten top honors

BY ERIC OLSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wisconsin's Johnny Davis is The Associated Press player of the year in the Big Ten Conference and the Badgers' Greg Gard is coach of the year.

Davis won top honors over Iowa's Keegan Murray on Tuesday, and both were unanimous picks for spots on the AP All-Big Ten team along with Purdue's Jaden Ivey in voting of journalists who cover the conference.

Nebraska freshman Bryce McGowens is newcomer of the year.

Joining Davis, Murray and Ivey on the all-conference first team are Ohio State's E.J. Liddell and Illinois' Kofi Cockburn. Liddell is a repeat first-team pick, and Cockburn was on the second team a year ago.

The second team is made up of Rutgers' Ron Harper Jr., Illinois' Trent Frazier, Indiana's Trayce Jackson-Davis, Purdue's Zach Edey and Michigan's Hunter Dickinson.

Davis burst onto the national stage this season after playing a total of 18 minutes and scoring eight points over 13 games as a freshman. He has averaged a nation-leading 24.1 points in eight games against Top 25 opponents, and his season average of 20 points per game is best by a Wisconsin player since 1994.

Davis scored a career-high 37 points in a win over Purdue and has two other 30-point games. He scored 25 or more in six other games.

McGowens was the first five-star recruit to sign with Nebraska and he made good on the hype. He's averaged 20.8 points over his last five games and leads all true freshmen nationally at 17.2 points per game.

Gard, who lost four starters from the 2020-21 team that won a game in the NCAA Tournament, coached his young team to a share of the Big Ten regular-season title.

The Badgers' 24 wins are their most in five years, and they've been ranked as high as No. 8 and have appeared in the Top 25 every week since Dec. 20. They are 15-2 in games decided by six or fewer points for the most "close" wins in Division I.

The 2022 AP All-Big Ten team, with players listed with school, class, height, weight and hometown ("u" denotes unanimous selection):

FIRST TEAM

u-Guard — Johnny Davis, Wisconsin, So., 6-5, 194, La Crosse, Wisconsin.

u-Guard — Jaden Ivey, Purdue, So., 6-4, 195, South Bend, Indiana.

Forward — E.J. Liddell, Ohio State, Jr., 6-7, 240, Belleville, Illinois.

u-Forward — Keegan Murray, Iowa, So., 6-8, 225, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

SECOND TEAM

MLB, union bargain for 16 hours

BY RONALD BLUM
AP BASEBALL WRITER

NEW YORK — Negotiators for locked-out players and Major League Baseball spent 16 1/2 hours bargaining, then recessed talks until Wednesday morning as Commissioner Rob Manfred let his deadline to reach a deal preserving a 162-game season pass.

Rob Manfred

Shortly after 3 a.m. on the 98th day of the lockout, MLB said no additional games had been canceled and talks will continue.

"The players' association requested to speak to their board early tomorrow before responding to our proposal and will be getting back to us in the morning," an MLB spokesman said in a statement.

A session Tuesday morning at MLB's office across the street from Radio City Music Hall was followed by an afternoon session at the union's office overlooking Rockefeller Center, about a three-block walk.

The sides then switched to talking by telephone from their separate offices.

MLB made moves toward players on the key economic issues of the luxury tax, the amount of a new bonus pool for pre-arbitration-eligible players and minimum salaries.

The league also pushed for its long-held goal of an international amateur draft.

Yet, it remained unclear whether this more intensive phase of talks would lead to an agreement or yet another breakdown in oft-strained negotiations that have dragged on for nearly a year.

Manfred originally set a Feb. 28 deadline for preserving opening day on March 31.

After 16 1/2 hours of bargaining in Jupiter, Florida, that began Feb. 28 and ended at 2:30 a.m. the following morning produced progress,

Manfred extended that deadline to 5 p.m. the following day.

Talks broke down, and Manfred announced the first two series for each team during the season had been canceled. Negotiators returned to New York and resumed bargaining on Sunday.

While it appears there is no chance opening day could take place as originally schedule, MLB told the union that Tuesday was the last possible day to reach an agreement that would allow a modified 162-game schedule, along with full salary and service time needed to reach free agency for players.

MLB on Tuesday offered a tax threshold starting at $230 million and rising to $242 million, a person familiar with the proposal said, confirming a move first reported by The Athletic.

The person, speaking to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because no public statements were authorized, said management's proposal contained tougher penalties at a higher payroll level than in the expired agreement.

The union began the week at $238 million for this year, rising to $263 million in 2026.

The union entered Monday asking for an $80 million bonus pool for this year and MLB was at $30 million. MLB offered a $700,000 minimum salary and the union asked for $725,000.

There were greater differences in the final four seasons of the proposed five-year deal.

The union's proposed figure for 2026 was $263 million at the start of the week.

Gonzaga remains atop AP Top 25 poll; Tennessee breaks into top 10

BY AARON BEARD
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

Tennessee kept winning against a demanding schedule of top teams in the Southeastern Conference. That has pushed the Volunteers to their highest ranking this season in The Associated Press men's basketball poll.

Rick Barnes

While Gonzaga, Arizona and reigning national champion Baylor remained atop Monday's poll, Rick Barnes' squad tied Purdue for No. 9 to crack the top 10 for the first time this season. That came after the Volunteers (23-7, 14-4 SEC) closed the regular-season schedule by beating No. 15 Arkansas despite blowing most of a 24-point lead.

Still, it marked their fourth straight win and ninth in 10 games. That stretch has included wins against No. 4 Auburn and No. 5 Kentucky, sending the Vols to this week's SEC Tournament in Tampa, Florida, as the No. 2 seed.

Defense has been a strength, with the Volunteers ranking third nationally in KenPom's adjusted efficiency by allowing 87.4 points per 100 possessions. They also rank seventh by getting a steal on 13.6% of defensive possessions and 18th by blocking 14.1% of opponents' shots.

They also rank 17th in Division I by forcing 16.2 turnovers per game.

"It's been hard, I can tell you," Barnes said of the SEC after the Arkansas win. "I think we've been able to learn from a lot. I think we'll learn from today. And we need to, because now you're in tournament play. If you have letups and keep throwing lifelines at the wrong time, it ends your season."

The Volunteers' four-spot climb in the Top 25 tied No. 13 UCLA and No. 16 Illinois for the week's biggest jumps.

THE TOP TIER

Mark Few's Bulldogs claimed 52 of 61 first-place votes to hold the No. 1 ranking for the fourth straight week and eighth time this season going back to the preseason poll. Gonzaga faced San Francisco on Monday night as it openend play in the semifinals of the West Coast Conference Tournament.

The Wildcats stayed at No. 2 for the third straight week under first-year coach Tommy Lloyd and claimed six first-place votes, while Scott Drew's Bears — who held the top spot for five weeks earlier this season — took the other three.

Auburn and Kentucky rounded out the top five, followed by Kansas, Duke, Villanova, Purdue and Tennessee.

RISING

Eight teams climbed from their positions last week, including Villanova rising three spots after beating No. 11 Providence and Butler last week, and Murray State moving up three spots to No. 19 after winning the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament.

SLIDING

Southern California had the biggest fall of the week, tumbling five spots to No. 21 after losses to Arizona and UCLA. No. 18 Houston fell four spots after losing to Memphis in its regular-season finale. In all, 10 teams slid from the previous week.

STATUS QUO

Five teams stayed in the same position, with No. 6 Kansas and No. 24 Iowa holding their position along with the top three teams.

WELCOME (BACK)

No. 23 Colorado State joined No. 25 North Carolina as the poll's new additions, bumping Ohio State and Alabama from last week's rankings. The Rams spent four weeks in December and January in the poll, peaking at No. 20.

The Tar Heels opened the year at No. 19 but fell out of the rankings by Thanksgiving — part of the Atlantic Coast Conference having just one ranked team in the Blue Devils for most of the season.

They hadn't received any votes in the past six polls, but jumped back in Monday after winning at Duke on Saturday in retiring Hall of Famer Mike Krzyzewski's final game at Cameron Indoor Stadium.

"I would say our expectations never changed," UNC junior big man Armando Bacot said. "I don't know if that's us being delusional or just confident. But we always felt like we were a great team. ... I don't want to be complacent and I don't want to be too excited because we've had big wins and haven't responded in the right way."

CONFERENCE WATCH

The Big 12, SEC and Big Ten led the way with four ranked teams each, followed by the Pac-12 and Big East with three.

The ACC joined the WCC with two ranked teams each, while the American Athletic, Ohio Valley and Mountain West conferences each had one.

Bengals place franchise tag on free safety Bates

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Bengals on Monday placed the franchise tag on free safety Jessie Bates III, keeping him with the team for the 2022 season.

The Bengals had tried unsuccessfully to come to terms on a long-term contract for the 25-year-old Bates, whose rookie deal expired at the end of the season, putting him on the verge of becoming a free agent.

Bates was selected in the second round of the 2018 draft and has emerged as one of the team leaders. He was a key player in 2021 as the Bengals reached their first Super Bowl in 33 years.

The franchise tag means Bates will be under contract through the 2022 season for roughly $13 million as the team continues to negotiate a long-term deal with him.

"Jessie has been an outstanding player here for four years," Cincinnati executive vice president Katie Blackburn said in a statement. "Over the past year, we've tried to extend his contract here in Cincinnati, and while that hasn't come to pass, we want him here for 2022 to be a part of what we think should be an exciting football season and bright future for our organization."

Bates has played in 163 games — all starts — for Cincinnati, and has 406 tackles and 10 interceptions, one for a touchdown.

Historic Board, applicants frustrated

BY MARK CAMPBELL

With a 130-block historic district that has been designated a National Historic Landmark worthy of protecting and preserving, Madison's Historic District Board of Review takes its watchdog job very serious.

But last week's meeting of the review board proved frustrating for several members when a number of complicated applications came up on the agenda at a time when board members were defenseless to do much about them.

Since the seven member board needs at least four votes to deny or approve an application — and all applications that can neither be denied or approved are automatically approved — having only four members available for the meeting left those who showed up facing an exercise in futility.

There were several applications that the board not only took no exception with but in fact applauded the efforts of property owners and architects to remain true to the city's history. There were also other applications that might have been rejected if the board had been at full strength as four of the nine applications came down to a pair of 2-2 ties and 3-1 and 4-0 votes to reject with all four granted approval since the board did not have the numbers to decide the issues either way.

To make matters more frustrating, one of the applications had been issued a building permit by another city department allowing a demolition to take place before the board even had a chance to review the structure. Two others saw sections of structures demolished prior to board review due to a misinterpretation on the part of the applicant or their contractor.

"I'm not sure why we're even here," HDBR Chairman Josh Wilber said at least twice during the meeting while going over the details of the applications.

Wilber conceded that the demolitions were probably honest mistakes and might have been approved anyway, but by not following the guidelines, the board never had the option of stopping a piece of history from being demolished or suggesting other options. Once a historic structure is gone you cannot undo the damage, he said.

"I'd like to change our habits in this town," Board member Owen McCall said, also voicing his frustration.

The process can be frustrating for the applicants, too.

Ken McWilliams, who is rehabbing a home in the 300 block of Poplar Street noted the cost for restoring the home's wooden windows and replacement of three vinyl windows with wood carries a $29,000 price tag while all new wooden clad windows would cost almost $10,000 and replacing with vinyl windows would be $5,000.

McWilliams, a former HDBR member, said vinyl windows are already being used on other homes in the area and they can be purchased to look the same as older wooded windows from the street — which is one purpose of the review process to make sure the city does not lose its visual appeal — so he rejected recommendations to spend three or six times as much for his windows.

The Major Samuel Woodfill Post 9 American Legion had been before the board twice seeking approval for a new video sign board that members think will allow them to better publicize events that are open to the general public. Although the post is a non-contributing structure, it is located in the historic district where video signs are not allowed.

Mike Bath, the post's first vice commander, said the plan is to not use all the features of the sign but to provide a better sign that is easier for the post to change without needing a bucket truck. In the end, the sign vote was 3-1 in favor with the application passing for the same reason as all others.

Mayor Bob Courtney noted at Tuesday's Madison City Council meeting that the Historic Board still has two vacancies that need to be filled and issued a plea for residents who might be willing to serve to step forward.
